DETAILED ACTION

1. This office action is in response to communication filed on 4/3/2007.
2. Claim 1 is presented for examination.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Langseth et al. (6,694,316 hereinafter Langseth).

With respect to claim 1, Langseth teaches a computer-controlled method for managing offers (abstract). Preparing data characterizing a plurality of offers, each offer being associated with a targeted individual and one of a plurality of channels for presenting offers data to the target individual (Figure 2A); selecting from the plurality of offers a number of offers for presenting to the individuals associated with those offers, including for at least some individuals, selecting from multiple offers associated with each of those individuals (col. 8, lines 31-53); presenting the selected offers to the associated individuals over the associated ones of the plurality of channels (col. 8, lines 31 to col. 9, lines 18-26); the selection being based on a rule-based engine executing offer data processing rules to determine which sets of offer data can be sent to each of those individuals, the data processing rules including an internal set of pre-defined rules being selected from the group consisting of prioritization rules, selection rules, and time-based rules. Langseth teaches that the affiliate's system may selectively choose the subject matter of content to be delivered to their subscribers and that selection may be based on the business of the affiliates. For example, a golf web site may only desire to enable its subscribers to access a sports channel. The affiliates send the content of the offer to a personalized intelligence network (PIN) and the PIN determines which offers to output to the subscribers based on certain criteria of the customer (Figure 19, 916). The PIN governs the presentation of the advertisements provided to the subscribers based on subscriber information, the type of service or channel being run, the time of day, the time of year, and the like (see Figure 19 and col. 3, lines 41-45 and col. 27, lines 45-64).

With respect to the newly amended feature of selecting from the sets of offer data includes allocating capacity of the plurality of channels to the selected offers. Langseth teaches selecting the advertisements or offers based on the capability of the channels to the selected offers. Langseth teaches selecting from a plurality of channels which advertisements to place based on the channel capacity and content of the channel. Langseth, clearly teaches in step 928, the advertisements being selected based on the channel being run or the capacity of the channel. Each channel accommodates or is capable of outputting different types of ads. For example, a golf site may only enable access to a sports channel.

With respect to the channels including direct channels and indirect channels. Official notice is taken that it is old and well known to use direct channels to direct personal communication with an individual when a business relationship has been established with that individual or indirect channels such as using an intermediary or the like when a business relationship hasn't been established with that individual in order for the customer to receive the information from a trusted source or channel. It would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art at the time of Applicant's invention to have included of a plurality of channels including direct channels and indirect channels in order to obtain the above mentioned advantage.

Response to Arguments

5. Applicant argues that Langseth doesn't teach allocating capacity of channels to the selected offers. The Examiner disagrees with Applicant because Langseth teaches . Each channel accommodates or is capable of outputting different types of ads. For example, a golf site may only enable access to a sports channel(col. 3, lines 41-45). As can be seen by Langseth each channel is capable of supporting certain types of ads.

Conclusion

6. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
